2017.12.10 · 🌐 Feeling grateful — At Chiayi Dalin Tzu Chi Hospital.

At Chiayi Dalin, I prepared to depart to Mexico. I was grateful for blessings from Supt. Lai & colleagues of Dalin Tzu Chi Hospital. I brought their love and prayers to the other corner of world.

Our first round of free clinics in Mexico was at noon under the scorching sun. There was big temperature fluctuation throughout the day. Hands could get swollen if bitten by the mosquitoes. Pictured here is a police officer who protects us twenty-four hours a day. In one of our conversation, he complained about chest pain but lab results did not show any abnormalities. After treating him for one hour, he said happily that he felt much better. I also gave him the Chinese origami character “Fortune” to wish him well.

Love has no Borders

A patient suffering knee injury for two months after the earthquake walked in with a walker. After treatment, she walked out immediately without a walker and expressed her love of Taiwan. She also told us about the suffering she had gone through since the disaster. Although she was tearful, she wanted to be brave and believed she would overcome the hardship and find a better future.

Seeing sunshine, seeing hope. Yesterday is in the past. We must cheer on for today. There are still long lines of people waiting for Tzu Chi Volunteers.

The adorable Leonardo. His mother was in so much pain she had to ask Tzu Chi volunteers to care for him. After my treatment, she was able to carry the little cutie home by herself.

The locals rush in and cannot bear the fact that the free clinic is coming to an end. Many years of knee pain finally received some temporary relief. Extricating pain and giving happiness is such a delightful matter.

The journey ended with emotional goodbyes. This experience touched me deeply. I am thankful for all the support and encouragement from friends, family and coworkers in Taiwan. Our love from Taiwan is now closely connected with Mexico. I will miss you all and I will continue to care for your well-beings even after I return to Taiwan.
